Pediatric Pearls: Partnering with Surgeons

Course Overview

Pediatric Surgical Specialists and Pediatricians work in concert to provide timely, safe, and effective care to children in need of surgical intervention. As a result, a common understanding and acceptance of standards of practice for surgical intervention are fundamental for all pediatric clinicians. Thus, pediatric clinicians need an increased understanding of the guidelines for referral for surgical management, improved clinical performance in the medical management of conditions prior to consideration of surgical intervention, and a deeper understanding of co-management of medical and surgical conditions with their surgical colleagues.

By improving these facets of education, pediatricians can reduce waste in our health care system with unnecessary referrals, improve efficiency by referring at the optimal time for surgical intervention, and avoiding delays in necessary care.

Learning Objectives

- Name the most common conditions for which pediatric primary care clinicians will refer patients to the four most commonly utilized surgical subspecialties, Pediatric ENT, Orthopedics, Urology and Plastic Surgery.
- Describe the current clinical guideline recommendations for management of the most common conditions requiring referral to the four named surgical specialties.
- Identify the criteria for referral for surgical intervention for ENT, Orthopedic, Urological and Plastic Surgical conditions.
