26th Annual Pediatric Ethics Conference

Overview

This year's conference examines the evolving ethical landscape of pediatric healthcare through diverse topics including sustainability, behavioral health, trauma-informed care, neonatal opioid withdrawal, and the intersections of ethics, policy, and law. Featuring expert-led talks, workshops, and panel discussions, the event provides a platform to explore challenges such as extended stay patients, mental health policies, and professional ethics in the face of legal divergence. Join us to engage with narratives, best practices, and advocacy strategies that strengthen ethical frameworks in pediatric care and community support.

Objectives

Following the presentations, attendees should be able to:

- Analyze the ethical issues facing children's hospitals to enhance understanding and decision-making in clinical practice.
- Evaluate the ethical challenges of meeting the behavioral health needs of youth in Colorado through active discussion and collaboration.
- Analyze the complex interplay of civil, legal, and ethical obligations involved in caring for neonates with opioid withdrawal and their families.
- Evaluate strategies to individually and organizationally navigate clinical scenarios where professional ethics and laws diverge.
- Reflect on narratives encountered in clinical work and identify best practices for engaging these narratives in ethics, research, care, and advocacy.
- Identify examples of how healthcare expertise can inform policy decisions.
- More to come..

Learner Outcome

Participants will gain enhanced knowledge and practical strategies to navigate complex ethical challenges in pediatric healthcare, including sustainability, behavioral health, trauma-informed care, and the intersections of ethics, policy, and law, enabling them to improve decision-making and advocacy in their professional practice.
